

Top tips

on bridging the digital gap to keep kids safe online

Mark Briggs is a Team Manager at Fostering People, a four-times consecutively Ofsted Outstanding independent fostering agency, with more than 30 years' experience working with children and young people. He's an Ambassador for the Child Exploitation and Online Protection (CEOP) Command, which is part of the National Crime Agency, and has these top tips for all parents and carers for keeping children safe online.

1.

Be interested, engaged, and confident

2.

Never assume a child is safe online, regardless of their background

5.

Maintain constant dialogue

Educate children before it's too late

3.

Let children seek help without fear of judgement

4.

For more information on our top tips, read our blog here.